HIGHLIGHTS:

- Guinness Storehouse: The Guinness story is a quintessentially Irish journey enlivened by colorful characters and the brand's iconic advertising. Naturally, after immersing yourself in all things Guinness, you'll want to savor a pint.
- Trinity College Long Room: In the 18th-century Old Library you'll find the Long Room, home to one of the world's most impressive library chambers, and some of Ireland's most cherished relics.
- St. Patrick's Cathedral: Ireland's largest cathedral is one of the few existing buildings from medieval Dublin and was already ancient when Jonathan Swift (author of Gulliver's Travels) acted as dean and was buried here in the 1700s.
- The Irish Emigration Museum: The Irish story doesn't end at the Emerald Isle's shores. Millions of Irish have emigrated and, in the process, reshaped other nations around the world with their unique presence.
- St. Stephen's Green Park: An emerald in the heart of Dublin, St. Stephen's Green is the perfect place to stop and smell the flowers. The park retains most of the Victorian design elements commissioned by Sir Arthur Guinness, who restored the briefly private green and reopened it to the city's people in 1880.
- The Merrion: This beautiful, toile-covered hotel is home to swanky Bar No. 23, casual Garden Room restaurant, Ireland's sole two Michelin-starred Restaurant Patrick Guilbaud, plus other foodie options.

- Roads: Both a publisher of high-end specialty books and a designer of signature fine fragrances and candles, At Roads is boutique like no other.
- Article: Homewares heaven with pieces by local and contemporary Irish designers.
